July 23, 2017. by John Kennedy. Generally, when valuing a company, there are two different ways to approach the valuation of the company: the first is the liquidation value of the company, and the second is the value of the company as a going concern. Most often in a mergers and acquisitions transaction, the target business will be valued as a going concern, unless the target company is in distress and the acquiring company is purchasing it to strip it down and sell the assets, or to remove ...
