The Author is a qualified Engineer and a qualified Theologian, thus means he knows about both fields, and you can see that in his approach. Rather than homing in on things that Science has gotten wrong, or make Christianity a slave to Science, we have strong views of both Science and Christianity - I like this as I have a Science Degree and am a Pastor :) I would recommend this to Christians ...

Science is for smart people. Religion is for knuckleheads. Science is modern and more highly evolved, whereas religion is medieval and pre-enlightened. Science is rational, whereas religion is dogmatic. And, most importantly, science strives for world peace while religious traditions foster violence. Science and religion are enemies, and the sooner science wins a decisive victory the better!

Review of Collins's Science & Faith: Friends or Foes?

We must find the convergence between science and scripture. God, and not chemistry and physics, is at the heart of ultimate reality. We must all start with presuppositions we believe to be true by faith. The alleged conflict between science and religion is really a conflict between worldviews with different presuppositions about reality.

Faith and Science: Friends or Foes | TASC

When modern people hear talk of science and faith, they don't know whether to stay silent or prepare for a heated debate. The story we often hear goes something like this: with the rise of science and technology, belief in God is foolish. We assume miracles cannot happen, that science and faith cannot mix.

I have faith in believing that, and I respect people who don't have faith. But I, I say, don't, don't put me in a box where I have to disregard all science in order to believe in God. I can have the science, and I can have God. And in fact, I think my understanding of the science only increases my faith in God.

Collins first defines faith and science, shows their relation, and explains what claims each has concerning truth. Then he applies the biblical teaching on creation to the topics of "conflict" between faith and science, including the age of the earth, evolution, and miracles. He considers what it means to live in a created world.
