The Sea Hawk

The Sea Hawk was the eleventh of twelve collaborations between actor Errol Flynn and director Michael Curtiz, and one of the best. It's a return to the sure-fire swashbuckler format that had given them their biggest successes so far, but it has a maturity and a darkness to it that was absent from their previous efforts.

One of the greatest actioners ever made, The Sea Hawk has been lovingly preserved by the Warner Archive in a 1080p transfer that will surely impress. Word of warning: over the years the picture suffered the slings and arrows of being repeatedly re-edited to fit time constraints, with the original camera negative for some portions lost to us for all time.
